stirring patriotism, compassionate intelligence, and a heartfelt sense of true romance...

By Virginia Campbell

Author Jessica James is a superb storyteller whose work stands proudly on my "keeper shelf". Writing with stirring patriotism, compassionate intelligence, and a heartfelt sense of true romance, Jessica thoroughly captures the hearts and minds of her readers. While she has specialized in exceptional historical fiction, her first contemporary work, "Meant to Be: A Novel of Honor and Duty", is an equally well-written, thrilling romantic suspense story. A chance meeting on the beach of Ocean City, Maryland would at first seem to be just a brief shared moment of time for Lauren Cantrell and Michael "Rad" Radcliff. Each has their own private agenda, their own duty to serve, and the limited hours they spend in each other's company are very special. They part, not sure if and when they will ever see each other again, but the hand of Fate will have its way. Just a few weeks later, Lauren and Rad are unexpectedly reunited on a top secret military mission to take place in Pakistan and Afghanistan. Lauren is the undercover operative who will lead Rad and his men to their target--one of the most wanted terrorists in the world. Failure is not an option, and the intense emotional connection between Rad and Lauren cannot interfere with their common goal: take down and eliminate one of the greatest threats to world safety. If they succeed, and survive, what will the future hold? Will love find a way to bring them together and keep them together? I have tremendous empathy for all of our armed services members and their families. I greatly appreciate the sacrifices made so that I may enjoy a free way of life here in the United States. Seeing our service members standing so proud in their uniforms makes me want to stand up taller and straighter, shoulders back! The greatest way to honor all of those who have served and sacrificed is to hold your loved ones close to your heart, and live your life in celebration of precious freedom. Make a new memory each day. Whether you gather together with others to observe ceremonial traditions, or you take a moment for quiet reflection, live each day to the fullest and savor the flavors of life. Read to remember. These are all sentiments that I hold dear, and it is very rewarding to find the same deeply-felt patriotism in the storytelling of Jessica James. I highly recommend all of her wonderfully-written and inspiring books, and I know other readers will enjoy adding them to their own "keeper shelf".
