"Transform" would be a more accurate title than "Transformed"

By Paul Forster

I found this to be an extremely frustrating study to lead in a small group. The series is based on the idea of a believer's call to "BE transformed by the renewing of your minds." Our small group had actually just studied how the verse this comes from (Rom. 12:2) fits into the flow of thought in Romans before our church launched this study. Paul spends the first 11 chapters of Romans outlining what God has DONE for us, concluding CH. 11 with a beautiful doxology of praise. The "Therefore" in CH. 12 signals a huge transition to how what God has DONE for us should affect our lives. Reading Romans, you'll see virtually no exhortations (statements about how we should live) in the first 11 chapters, but beginning in CH. 12, the book becomes virtually non-stop exhortations. This is an incredibly important truth for the Christian life: our motivation for radically changed lives flows from what God has already DONE for us in Christ Jesus. I firmly believe that, if someone were to approach Paul about how to Unfortunately, Rick Warren does not understand this principle. He stated once (correctly) something to the effect that Christian change comes from God, but in the very next paragraph, listed things we could do to bring that about. Better understanding what God has done for us wasn't among those items. The seven chapters in the book go through various areas of the Christian life and provide an overview of how we should live. Some of the material is very well supported by what the Bible teaches, some would be better categorized as good advice rather than Biblical teaching. Rick Warren's tendency to misappropriate verses to support what he wants to say is evident at times.

Overall, I did not find this study particularly helpful. I may not quite be the intended audience, but I still believe that there are far more effective ways for anyone to deepen one's walk with God than through this particular study, and I do not recommend it.
